

We know a Master of Contemporary Education can be a big financial commitment, here are some options to make it more accessible.

As part of the Masters programme is a real-life in-depth change project, designed to add measurable, beneficial value to you, your school and your education communities – there are a range of different people and groups who will benefit from your study.

Your school

Consider approaching your Principal or senior leadership as they may have options or funding available. Discuss how it's an investment in you, your school, and your community, with measurable benefits for all.

Your Kāhui Ako or clusters

Consider talking to your Kāhui Ako or Cluster, there may be options there, discuss the change project and benefit to your students, school and community.

Your community

Approach your community for local scholarships and grants. There are more opportunities out there than you may realise. Start with a local Google search. Share your ideas for the change project to help show the benefit to your wider community.

StudyLink

MCE students can apply for a student loan from StudyLink, and this funding can be allocated each year.

The Mind Lab payment timing

Payment for the part-time programme is split across the two years you study. So your first part payment is required when you begin, then the other part is required a year later.
